

"Getting ready for bed": An explanatory tool for deconstructing tacit knowledge

We have all been told as children, or have told others, in our lifetimes: "Now get ready for bed." Each individual knows, implicitly, or tacitly, what this means in his or her environment or culture. Breaking down this simple and universal instruction identifies the many facets, and tasks, involved in the action of getting ready for bed.

